BETTER ON HANDS CUTICURA HEALED

Were Sore With Rash. Could Hardly Work or Put Hands in Water.

"I had better on my hands so badly that I could hardly work.
They were sore with a rash and would bleed. I could not close my hands nor put them in water. I tried several remedies without any relief. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and a few applications gave relief. I bought more and when I had used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one fifty-cent box of Cuticura Ointment my hands were healed." (Signed) H. F. Tillman,

MANNIX EN ROUTE TO BRAVE BARS OF BRITISH PREMIER

Wild Crowd, Full of Fight, Gives Him Ear-Splitting Send-Off.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, July 31.—Daniel J. Mannix, Archbishop of Melbourne and outspoken advocate of Irish freedom, tonight was many miles at sea aboard the liner Baltic, steaming eastward toward whatever fate awaits him in Ireland—his native land—a visit to which has been forbidden him by the British government.

His friend and fellow-countryman, Eamon de Valera, "president of the Irish republic" who was suspected to be planning to accompany the Australian prelate on his expedition of defiance, was left behind.

Raised on the shoulders of Irish sympathizers, he yelled himself hoarse in tribute to their two leaders after engaging in a series of savage fights on deck and ship with opponents of their cause, the Irish "president" watched the great ship being towed into midstream and, from afar, received a final benediction from the venerable father, whose air of calm courage, brought volley after volley of cheers from sympathizers ashore.

Fights Way to Ship.
Hours before the ship sailed, men, women and children carrying American and Irish flags and signs mocking Premier Lloyd George, assembled at the pier. The prelate was forced virtually to fight his way through the throng from his automobile to the gangway.

Then trouble began. An Englishman standing on the upper deck hurled a taunt at the archbishop. In a second husky longshoreman climbed up the sides of the ship like flies, surrounded the passenger and pummeled him. Only a cordon of detectives with revolvers pressed into the ribs of the fighting huskies brought rescue to the stranded Britisher.

This was the most spectacular of a series of brawls. Every insult to the Irish republic was met with a punch, and there was many a sore head when the day was over.

Ordinarily only those who have passed from the American customs authorities are permitted within the fenced inclosure around the gangway on sailing days. Today, however, the friends of Archbishop Mannix defied customs and all other regulations. They rushed from their feet the regular guards and before police reserves could arrive were all on the ship. Only prompt preparations to lift the gangways prevented many of the enthusiastic demonstrators from actually getting aboard.

De Valera Houses Suspicion.
Suspicion that de Valera would sail with the archbishop ran high until just before the ship moved out. Escorted by his secretary, the Irish "president" stepped aboard the liner more than an hour before sailing time and took his place with the prelate. A dozen special detectives surrounded the archbishop and a number escorted him as far as Sandy Hook, returning by pilot boat.

Appearance aboard ship of de Valera instantly brought rumors that the Irish "president" planned to smuggle himself overseas and run a British gantlet. Excitement increased as the last call ashore was sounded and de Valera still remained. Suddenly, escorted by a steward, he went below, but in the course of a few moments he reappeared and stood with the archbishop on the promenade deck until a few minutes before the gangplank was hoisted aboard. As he stepped ashore he was hoisted on the shoulders of the crowd.

Bishop "Hits" Again.
Shortly after his arrival at the dock the archbishop issued a statement in which he said he had been "represented in certain quarters as a promoter of strife." He declared that he really was working for peace in Ireland. He said the peace he hoped for "is a peace not resting on force, but on justice and the free will of the people concerned."

The archbishop's statement in part follows:
"At the moment of my departure from the United States I wish to renew my thanks to all of those who for the past two months have been giving me such a cordial welcome."
"For some days past I seem to be one of the few at this side of the Atlantic on the other side of whom no speculating about my route. At all events I am sailing as I said I would."

"I have spoken of things that I know to be true. I have done the things I believe to be right and I am unafraid of the consequences."
"I am represented in certain quarters as a promoter of strife. In fact, I am working for peace in Ireland, in the British empire and outside that empire. For the peace that I hope for is a peace not resting on force but on justice and the free will of the people concerned. There are those who think that an archbishop should not speak and act as I have spoken and acted unless perhaps he is a Belgian cardinal."
"I cannot accept that comfortable British contention. I think Ireland has just the same rights as Belgium to say what form of government she will have."
"I go further and say that if the Irish people are rightly struggling to be free they have some claim to look to me for something more than tolerant and barren sympathy, for, like them, I am an Irishman."

BIBLE SCHOOL SUCCESS.
Kiddies Hear Pretty Stories as They Learn Lessons.
"And they lived happily ever afterward."
One hundred boys and girls, their faces expressing the keenest interest in the adventures of Lochinvar, breathed deep sighs of regret when the story came to an end. For nearly half an hour they had been following the career of the strapping youth, came out of the west, as narrated by a teacher at the daily vacation Bible school in the Fifth Baptist Church, E street near 7th street west. Every morning children of the community gather in the church, where they sing patriotic and nature songs, play games and have a good time in general. The success of the school is largely due to the work of Miss Elizabeth Payne of Charlottesville, Va., principal, and Miss Elizabeth Richardson, her assistant.
The basket-weaving class is under the direction of Mrs. Herbert Howell, assisted by Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Burgess. Mrs. Coker and her assistant teachers have had great success in teaching the girls the principles of domestic art.
The total enrollment of pupils is 327. The school will hold its commencement exercises Thursday night at 7:45 o'clock in the church. On Friday night there will be a lawn fete and exhibition at 404 7th street southwest.

SHOT IN BOTH LEGS.
John M. Wright Injured in Domestic Quarrel, Say Police.

John M. Wright, colored, 27 F street northwest, was shot through the upper part of both legs during an argument in his home yesterday afternoon with his wife, Dora Wright. She was arrested and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.
The colored man was taken to the Emergency Hospital. Physicians at the institution last night expressed the belief that he would recover. The two children of the couple were taken into custody by the board of children's guardians.

CONSTANTINOPLE NOW RINGS WITH JAZZ AND WILD GAYETY

Under Allied Occupation City Is Rendezvous of Millionaires Seeking After-War Frivolities.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 31.—Constantinople now combines all the frenzy of a new mining camp and a world seaport. It is "the end of the trail" for all the Balkan states and everything west of Suez on the Mediterranean. Caucasian oil men, Donets basin miners, Anatolian sheep and cattle kings, Greek war millionaires and Syrian merchants rush to Constantinople to pop champagne in proof of their success. Soldiers and sailors of half a dozen nations swell the population and add to the cosmopolitan aspect of the streets and pleasure resorts.

Under allied occupation the city has become a wilder place than it was under the Turks. There are no civil courts. None of the allies desire to assume responsibility for reforms other than are necessary to safeguard life.

Italian, French and British troops co-operate with the Turkish gendarmarie in keeping order. But everybody's job is nobody's job. Consequently Constantinople is a very wide-open town. Midnight closing is enforced pretty generally, but until that hour there is little interference with dance halls, gambling dives and redlight districts, unless murder is committed.

City Filled With Gayety.
Leadsville and Goldfield in their dullest days never offered anything wilder than certain sections of Constantinople, where jazz bands vie with Neapolitan orchestras and tango singers in their efforts to attract wayfarers into the beer tunnels and dance halls filled to overflowing with the painted women of many nationalities.

Half a dozen summer gardens offer vaudeville programs which attract thousands of persons every night who seem to have far more interest in the drinks and restless crowds than in the Russian prima donnas and bare-legged dancers, whose art is usually as meager as the attire.
Turks, Arabs, Bedouins, Syrians and Assyrians, gorgeously clad in native costumes, elbow their way among Cossacks and Georgians, whose uniforms are far more brilliant than their recent military achievements.

Coal-black French colonials, resplendent in red fez and green khaki, mingle with Sikhs and Punjabis, whose long hair and many-colored headresses are wrapped in sombre brown.

Civilians, soldiers and sailors from all parts of the world are hopelessly jumbled together in Constantinople crowds, and are so busy looking at each other that tenors from the Petograd opera, naughty French singers from Montmartre and Austrian strong-jawed ladies claim but slight attention.

Unsuited for Motors.
Constantinople itself is a grand pageant every day. Its main thoroughfare, Rue Grand Pera, is more fascinating than any scene which producers can ever hope to stage. Camel drivers lead their patient trains, burdened with charcoal, through the maze of street cars, shrieking army motor cars and carriages, piloted over the rough paving at breakneck speed by Turkish hostlers, who crack their whips and shout constantly at high pitch to pedestrians who venture off the narrow sidewalks.

Turks mounted on tiny donkeys move indifferently through this melstrom. Occasionally Turkish peasants drive a flock of sheep or Turkeys into the swirl of traffic, and serene oxen draw heavy carts along at a pace so slow that drivers of military camions curse them in ten different languages.

The narrow, crooked streets of Constantinople are ill suited to motor traffic, and the slow-going fatalistic Turk is little inclined to change his pace. Consequently there are many accidents, and the indifference with which foreign military cars are driven has done much to intensify Turkish hatred of foreigners.
